Directions (Q. 31- Q.35): Given below is a statement of legal principle followed by a factual situation. Apply the principle to the facts given below and select the most appropriate answer.

31. LEGAL PRINCIPLE: In case of a breach of contract, compensation can be awarded for the personal inconvenience suffered by a party by reason of the breach, which naturally arose in the usual course of things from such breach, or which the parties knew, when they made the contract to be likely to result from the breach of it.

FACTUAL SITUATION: Sunita and Sushmita bought bus tickets for a journey from Adyar to Mandaveli. The bus was to go to St. Thomas Mount via Mandaveli. However, the driver mistakenly took a wrong direction and the two girls were dropped at a distance of 2½ miles from Mandaveli on the highway. With no other transportation in sight nor a place to stay, the two had to walk 2½ miles at midnight. Later they filed a case against the bus company and claimed Rs. 5000 as damages for inconvenience caused in having to walk and Rs. 6500 for Sushmita having fallen ill by catching cold during the night.

DECISION:

- (A) Both the amounts are liable to be paid because Sunita and Sushmita suffered loss for no fault of theirs.
  - (B) The bus company is liable to pay both the amounts claimed because the loss was suffered on account of the fault of the bus company and the inconvenience suffered and illness arose was in the normal course of things from breach of contract.
  - (C) The compensation for inconvenience suffered by being forced to walk at night is liable to be paid by the bus company. However, no compensation for Sushmita's illness because this was not expected on account of breach of contract.
  - (D) The bus company is not liable to pay any amount, because it was the driver's fault
32. FACTUAL SITUATION: In order to ensure that people live in an amicable atmosphere the Government of India decided to abolish courts and constituted Dispute Settlement Boards. Further to achieve this objective, the law stipulated that lawyers should not be allowed to espouse the claims of parties, and instead their claims be espoused by social workers.

LEGAL PRINCIPLES: (I) Any law made by the Parliament that infringes the fundamental rights of the citizens is invalid and unenforceable.

(II) Freedom to carry on trade or profession of one's own choice is a fundamental right.

(III) The Parliament is competent to impose reasonable restrictions on the exercise of this right.

(IV) If the restrictions, on fundamental rights imposed by the Parliament, totally removes or nullifies any fundamental right then it will be construed as an unreasonable restriction.

DECISION:

- (A) The law made by the Parliament is valid as it does not infringe any fundamental right.
- (B) The law made by the Parliament is valid as even though there is restriction of fundamental right, such a restriction is reasonable.

- (C) The law made by the Parliament is invalid as it constitutes an infringement of fundamental rights and the restriction imposed is not reasonable.
- (D) None of the above answer is correct.

33. LEGAL PRINCIPLES: A right to action cannot arise out of an illegal activity.

FACTUAL SITUATION: A and B were thieves engaged in stealing cars and other vehicles. Once they stole a car; and while driving off, they had to cross a city. They engaged a driver to drive them through the city, since they did not know the route inside. The indicator lamp of the car was not working and the thieves had not realised this, and therefore, had not told about it to the driver. While driving, through the city, the car was hit by another vehicle because of the faulty indicator. In the accident, the driver was injured and he filed a suit against A and B.

DECISION:

- (A) The driver would lose, because he was driving a stolen car.
- (B) The driver would win, because he was not a party to the stealing of car.
- (C) The driver would win because he did not know anything about the stealing.
- (D) None of the above answer is correct.

34. LEGAL PRINCIPLES: A man would be responsible for all direct consequences of his act, in so far as he could reasonably foresee them as arising from his act.

FACTUAL SITUATION: A ship carrying petroleum was moving on the high sea. On a short halt in a port, the master of the ship engaged some stevedores to load some metallic planks onto the ship. While loading the planks, a plank slipped from the hands of stevedore and the spark, emitted thereby, ignited petroleum vapour and caused considerable damage to the goods. The owner of the goods filed a suit against the master of the ship.

DECISION:

- (A) The master of the ship is not liable, because he was not responsible for the act of stevedore.
- (B) The master of the ship is liable, because he is responsible for the acts of stevedore since he engaged them.
- (C) The master is liable, because he should have foreseen the consequences of the stevedore's act.
- (D) None of the above answer is correct.

35. LEGAL PRINCIPLES: All minorities, whether based on religion or language shall have the rights to establish and administer educational institution of their choice.

FACTUAL SITUATION: Md. Yusuf wants to establish an educational institution to help the poor person of his community and to educate the children of the community. Yusuf being a very rich man has no problem regarding finance for institution. Therefore he applies to state government to grant him permission to establish and administer the institution. State government rejects his plea on ground that said institution will create communal tension in the proposed area. Yusuf has following remedies:

- (A) He should file a civil suit in District Court.
- (B) He should file a special leave petition before Supreme Court.
- (C) He has no remedy under the law.
- (D) He could file a writ petition either before the High Court or the Supreme Court.

SECTION- C : REASONING

71. For one academic year, all the students at a high school were observed. The aim was to test the hypothesis that studying more increased a student's chances of earning a higher grade. It turned out that the students who spent the most time studying did not earn grades as high as did many students who studied less. Nonetheless, the researchers concluded that the results of the observation supported the initial hypothesis.

Which one of the following, if true, most helps to explain why the researchers drew the conclusion described above?

- (A) The students who spent the most time studying earned higher grades than did some students who studied for less time than the average.

- (B) The students tended to get slightly lower grades as the academic year progressed.
- (C) In each course, the more a student studied, the better his or her grade was in that course.
- (D) The students who spent the least time studying tended to be students with no more than average involvement in extracurricular activities.

72. Educator: It has been argued that our professional organization should take decision about important issues - such as raising dues and taking political stands - by a direct vote of all members rather than by having members vote for officers who in turn make the decisions. This would not; however, be the right way to decide these matters, for the vote of any given individual is much more likely to determine organizational policy by influencing the election of an officer than by influencing the result of a direct vote on a single issue.

Which one of the following principles would, if valid, most help to justify the educator's reasoning?

- (A) No procedure for making organizational decisions should allow one individual's vote to weigh more than that of another.
- (B) Outcomes of organizational elections should be evaluated according to their benefit to the organization as a whole, not according to the fairness of the methods by which they are produced.
- (C) Important issues facing organizations should be decided by people who can devote their full time to mastering the information relevant to the issues.
- (D) An organization's procedures for making organizational decisions should maximize the power of each member of the organization to influence the decisions made.

73. Mayor: Local anti-tobacco activists are calling for expanded antismoking education programs paid for by revenue from heavily increased taxes on cigarettes sold in the city. Although the effectiveness of such education programs is debatable, there is strong evidence that the taxes themselves would produce the sought-after reduction in smoking. Surveys show that cigarette sales drop substantially in cities that impose stiff tax increases on cigarettes.

Which one of the following, if true, most undermines the reasoning in the argument above?

- (A) A city-imposed tax on cigarette will substantially reduce the amount of smoking in the city if the tax is burdensome to the average cigarette consumer.
- (B) Consumers are more likely to continue buying a product if its price increases due to higher taxes than if its price increases for some other reason.
- (C) Usually, cigarette sales will increase substantially in the areas surrounding a city after that city imposes stiff taxes on cigarettes.
- (D) People who are well informed about the effects of long-term tobacco use are significantly less likely to smoke than are people who are not informed.

74. Gotera: Infants lack the motor ability required to voluntarily produce particular sounds, but produce various babbling sounds randomly. Most children are several years old before they can voluntarily produce most of the vowel and consonant sounds of their language. We can conclude that speech acquisition is entirely a motor control process rather than a process that is abstract or mental.

Which one of the following is an assumption required by Gotera's argument?

- (A) Speech acquisition is a function only of one's ability to produce the sounds of spoken language.
- (B) During the entire initial babbling stage, infants cannot intentionally move their tongues while they are babbling.
- (C) The initial babbling stage is completed during infancy.
- (D) The initial babbling stage is the first stage of the speech acquisition process.

75. Reducing stress lessens a person's sensitivity to pain. This is the conclusion reached by researchers who played extended audiotapes to patients before they underwent surgery and afterward while they were recovering. One tape consisted of conversation; the other consisted of music. Those who listened only to the latter tape required less anaesthesia during surgery and fewer painkillers afterward than those who listened only to the former tape.

Which one of the following is an assumption on which the researchers' reasoning depends?

- (A) All of the patients in the study listened to the same tape before surgery as they listened to after surgery.
- (B) Anticipating surgery is no less stressful than recovering from surgery.
- (C) Listening to music reduces stress.
- (D) The psychological effects of music are not changed by anaesthesia or painkillers.

Directions: In the following questions, each question has a statement followed by two conclusions. Taking the statement to be true, decide which of the given conclusions definitely follows from the given statement. Indicate your answer as (A) if only I follows, (B) if only II follows (C) if neither I, nor II follows and (D) if both I and II follows.

76. Statement : The Supreme Court gave a judgement that the maintenance of old age parents is the responsibility of the married girls, if they do not have brothers.

- Conclusions I : Constitution is always interpreted to help oppressed people out.
II : Before the Supreme Court gave the verdict, a married girl must have denied to pay for the maintenance to her parents.

77. Statement : Ideas given by our ancestors that were once discarded as uneconomical and unviable, turn out to be as functional and inevitable in present circumstances.

- Conclusions I : In ancient period, ideas were considered either completely functional or totally infeasible.
II : Ideas cannot change from time to time.

Direction: In each question below is given statement followed by two assumptions numbered I and II. An assumption is something supposed or taken for granted. You have to consider the statement and the following assumptions and decide which of the assumptions is implicit in the statement. Mark answer:

- (A) If only I assumption is implicit;
- (B) If only assumption II is implicit;
- (C) If neither I nor II is implicit; and
- (D) If both I and II are implicit.

78. Statement:
“Use ‘M’ Brand shoes. They are available in all sizes and last longer” - an advertisement in the newspaper ‘A’.

Assumption I:
Some people do not know about ‘M’ brand shoes.

Assumption II:
People generally prefer shoes which last longer.

79. Statement:
Lack of stimulation in the first four or five years of life can have adverse consequences.

Assumption I:
A great part of the development of observed intelligence occurs in the earliest years of life.

Assumption II:
50 per cent of the measurable intelligence at age 16 is predictable by the age of four.

Directions (Q. 146 – 150): The questions in this section is based on the passage. The questions are to be answered on the basis of what is stated or implied in the passage. For some of the questions, more than one of the choices could conceivably answer the question. However, you are to choose the best answer; that is, the response that most accurately and completely answers the questions.

In principle, a cohesive group - one whose members generally agree with one another and support one another's judgments – can do a much better job at decision making than it could if it were non-cohesive. When cohesiveness is low or lacking entirely, compliance out of fear of recrimination is likely to be strongest. To overcome this fear, participants in the group's deliberations need to be confident that they are members in good standing and that the others will continue to value their role in the group, whether or not they agree about a particular issue under discussion. As members of a group feel more accepted by the others, they acquire greater freedom to say what they really think, becoming less likely to use deceitful arguments or to play it safe by dancing around the issues with vapid or conventional comments. Typically, then, the more cohesive a group becomes, the less its members will deliberately censor what they say out of fear of being punished socially for antagonizing their fellow members.

But group cohesiveness can have pitfalls as well: while the members of a highly cohesive group can feel much freer to deviate from the majority, their desire for genuine concurrence on every important issue often inclines them not to use this freedom. In a highly cohesive group of decision makers, the danger is not that individuals will conceal objections they harbour regarding a proposal favoured by the majority, but that they will think the proposal is a good one without attempting to carry out a critical scrutiny that could reveal grounds for strong objections. Members may then decide that any misgivings they feel are not worth pursuing – that the benefit of any doubt should be given to the group consensus. In this way, they may fall victim to a syndrome known as “groupthink”, which one psychologist concerned with collective decision making has defined as “a deterioration of mental efficiency, reality testing, and moral judgment that results from in-group pressures”.

Based on analyses of major fiascos of international diplomacy and military decision making, researchers have identified groupthink behaviour as a recurring pattern that involves several factors: overestimation of the group's power and morality, manifested, for example, in an illusion of invulnerability, which creates excessive optimism; closed-mindedness to warnings of problems and to alternative viewpoints; and unwarranted pressures toward uniformity, including self-censorship with respect to doubts about the group's reasoning and a concomitant shared illusion of unanimity concerning group decisions. Cohesiveness of the decision-making group is an essential antecedent condition for this syndrome but not a sufficient one, so it is important to work toward identifying the additional factors that determine whether group cohesiveness will deteriorate into groupthink or allow for effective decision making.

146. Why does the author think that the cohesive group can do a much better job at decision making than it could if it were non-cohesive?
- (A) The members of a highly cohesive group can feel much freer to deviate from the majority.
  - (B) Individuals will not conceal objections they harbour regarding a proposal favoured by the majority.
  - (C) Participants in the group's deliberations are confident that they are members in good standing and that the others will continue to value their role in the group, whether or not they agree about a particular issue under discussion.
  - (D) All of the above.
147. Which one of the following most accurately expresses the main point of the passage?
- (A) Despite its value in encouraging frank discussions, high cohesion can lead to a debilitating type of group decision making called groupthink.
  - (B) Group members can guard against groupthink if they have a good understanding of the critical role played by cohesion.
  - (C) Groupthink is a dysfunctional collective decision-making pattern that can occur in diplomacy and military affairs.
  - (D) Low cohesion in groups is sometimes desirable when higher cohesion involves a risk of groupthink behaviour.
148. A group of closely associated colleagues has made a disastrous diplomatic decision after a series of meetings marked by disagreement over conflicting alternatives. It can be inferred from the passage that the author would be most likely to say that this scenario.
- (A) provides evidence of chronic indecision, thus indicating a weak level of cohesion in general.
  - (B) indicates that the group's cohesiveness was coupled with some other factor to produce a groupthink fiasco
  - (C) provides no evidence that groupthink played a role in the group's decision.
  - (D) provides evidence that groupthink can develop even in some groups that do not demonstrate an "illusion of unanimity".
149. The passage mentions which one of the following as a component of groupthink?
- (A) unjustified suspicions among group members regarding an adversary's intentions.
  - (B) strong belief that the group's decisions are right.
  - (C) group members working under unusually high stress, leading to illusions of invulnerability.
  - (D) the deliberate use of vapid, clichéd arguments.
150. It can be inferred from the passage that both the author of the passage and the researchers mentioned in the passage would be most likely to agree with which one of the following statements about groupthink?
- (A) Groupthink occurs in all strongly cohesive groups, but its contribution to collective decision making is not fully understood.

- (B) The casual factors that transform group cohesion into groupthink are unique to each case.
- (C) The continued study of cohesiveness of groups is probably fruitless for determining what factors elicit groupthink.
- (D) On balance, groupthink cannot be expected to have a beneficial effect in a group's decision making.
